Wayne County Prosecutor Kym Worthy points to autopsy diagram of body of Terrance Kellom, 19, during press conference Aug. 19, declaring no charges will be brought in his death.

DETROIT – ““I knew she wasn’t dude,” Arnetta Grable Jr. told VOI Prosecutor Kym Worthy’s announcement charges would be brought against Quinn in the death of Terrance Ke

“I knew the media was going to pr at the same time, like they did witl said.

“I was at the hair salon when Kym decision on the Channel 2 News,” in the shop were saying Terrance l seed, that he had warrants out. No he was not convicted, and never will be convicted because he’s dead now. Nobody ever c said he was turning his life around. She [Worthy] got up there and justified the shooting the hell did he get shot in the back if he was coming at the cops with a hammer.”

Grable has been active in the protest movement against Kellom’s killing by a “Detroit Fu Team.

Three-time killer cop Eugene Brown shot Grable’s brother Lamar, 20, to death in 1996. ’ prosecute Brown, despite a multi-million jury judgment in the family’s favor, and expos report recommending that charges be filed against Brown for killing Grable and others. ’ Lamar’s name took ten years, overlapping Worthy’s tenure in office.

Kellom was shot multiple times and killed after a seven-member multi-jurisdictional Detroit Fugitive Apprehension Task Force (D-FAT) invaded his father Kevin Kellom's home with an armed robbery arrest warrant, but no search warrant. Police identified the shooter as Immigration and Customs Enforcement (I.C.E.) agent Mitchell Quinn, a former Detroit police officer. They said he fired because Kellom threatened him with a hammer.

“The police knocked on the door, I opened the door, they came in,”

Terrance's father Kevin Kellom said in part April to come in the way they did. They bro they executed my son in my face. My fists, no hammer. My son reached for his chest. After that, eight more shots come in contact with a young Black m in death?”

Worthy acted as judge and jury post-conference Aug. 19. She declared Kellom guilty of the armed robbery cited in the warrant without a trial. Her declaration was put into black and white in a timeline slide which said Kellom robs pizza del.”

That was the arrest warrant police were executing when they also executed Kellom. They without a search warrant, which was not signed until hours after Kellom was killed.

Worthy also claimed Kevin Kellom, who said he had witnessed the first two shots before the dining room, lied repeatedly in his accounts. She said Kellom and five other witnesses subjected to interrogations through court-ordered investigative subpoenas. At these eve allowed legal representation and are forced to give their statements under oath in a hostile atmosphere.

“As always, we let the facts in evidence and absolutely nothing else guide us,” she said. “No one person, not the news media, not letters, not protests, not petitions, not emails threatening or otherwise, not phone calls, not any member of the public, not any organization, and no threats will dictate any perceived ideas of justice.”

Numerous police cars surrounded the Kellom home at Evergreen and W. Chicago on Detroit’s west side during the press conference, according to a report from a Kellom family member. Evidently, Detroit Police Chief James Craig feared a popular uprising in reaction to the decision.

Hundreds had marched outside the Kellom home, taking the streets, the day after Terrance Kellom was killed, as a fiery rebellion raged on in Baltimore against the police custody death of Freddie Gray, Jr. A vigil and three other “Once in the neck with a downward trajectory and the shoulder with a downward trajectory and on the posterior flank with a slightly upward trajectory, the abdomen, and once through and through in a downward trajectory that exited out of the groin.

Referring to the “posterior flank” wound, she said the right of his back is consistent with his body twisted.

No such explanation is given in the complete ME report finally released Aug. 20, and Worthy cited no ballistic effect. The ME’s report says simply regarding the wound on Kellom’s back:

Family attorney Karri Mitchell has contended Kellom was shot at least once in the back, shedding doubt on the claim that only ThQuinn shot Kellom as he ran toward

PENETRATING GUNSHOT WOUND TO THE RIGHT LOWER BACK (GSW#3):

There was an entrance gunshot wound on the right lower back, 23-1/2 inches below the top of the head and 6 inches right of the midline. The wound track proceeded from this injury through the soft tissue, peritoneal cavity, fractured the anterior right 10th rib and ended at a near-exit on the right upper abdominal quadrant, 22 inches below the top of the head and 2 inches right of the anterior midline, where a deformed jacketed was recovered and retained. The wound track was from back to front, right to left and upward.

The doctor’s report on the wounds supported the claim that Kellom he advanced on D-FAT members. Kellom’s father said at one point that he fell to his knees after the shots.

Worthy showed a body diagram of Kellom’s gunshot wounds from the Wayne County Medical Examiner’s (WCME) autopsy report, but did not release the entire report to the media at the time, only choosing instead to give her own interpretation of the chart.

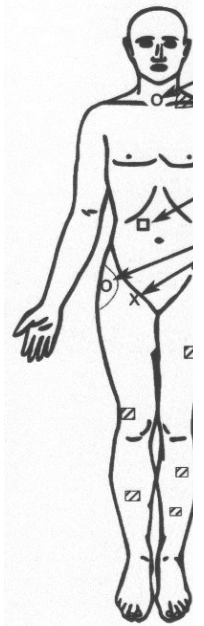

The report was finally released the next day. In a highly unusual move, Worthy earlier on Tuesday sealed the autopsy report and all other evidence in the case sealed pending her decision on charging Quinn.

Worthy’s Communications Officer Maria Miller said regarding the sealed autopsy report that she had requested that the Medical Examiner not distribute the report if it will interfere with an investigation.

witnesses had to be questioned about the fatal shooting. In this instance it was granted [by the ME] because we were able to show that the release of the information would interfere with the investigation.”

She said she could not cite a legal explanation for this and referred that question to attorneys for the ME. In its original May 8 Freedom of Information Act request for the report, VOD cited Swickard v. Wayne County Medical Examiner, 438 Mich. 536, 475 N.W.2d 304, 19 Media L. Rep. 1833 (1991), affirming 184 Mich. App. 662, 459 N.W.2d 92, 17 Media L. Rep. (1990) (summary disposition affirmed for newspaper in FOIA action holding autopsy reports to be public records).

Worthy said occupants of the house at the time of the shooting were Terrance Kellom and his unidentified “new girlfriend,” his father Kevin Kellom with his “girlfriend” Yvette Johnson (to w/ Terrance’s sister Teria and her boyfriend, and Ter girlfriend.”

“Kevin Kellom’s girlfriend was in the upstairs bed a female officer was called upstairs,” Worthy said.

“Two DFAT officers went upstairs, and found Ter attic crawl space,” she continued. “The Oakland C the crawl space, and observed him hiding by a heating duct. Terrance Kellom was order officer, ‘I have a gun, shoot me bitch, kill me.’ He was observed with a hammer in his ha heating duct and began to hit floor with the hammer, then crawled through the hole he r DFAT officer watching him radioed that he was going through the floor. The officer ran l southwest bedroom, where he believed he would drop down.”

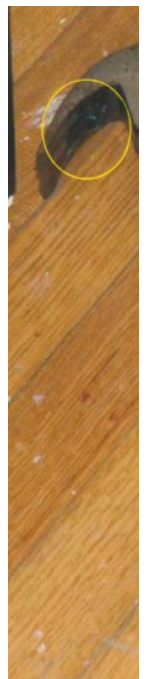

Despite Worthy's description of Kellom's repeated, forceful use of the hammer, she said Kellom's fingerprints were NOT found on the hammer, only spots of his blood. She showed a photo of the hammer and a map describing its alleged location on the hallway floor near where Kellom fell.

This reporter earlier went to the upstairs bedroom involved with a family member. The "crawl space" is actually part of that bedroom, not an "attic." There is no third level in the house.

A very small hole in the crawl space floor was observed, which did not appear large enough for a human being to get through. Worthy claimed it was large enough for Kellom, who was 5'9" and 145 lbs., measuring it at 20 by 11.5 inches. There was additionally no heating duct apparatus in the crawl space, although photos Worthy displayed of it showed large pieces of metal hanging out. The photos were hard to interpret and are not shown here, but in the link at bottom of story. They contain several confusing overlays.

She did not explain why the three police officers said to be in the room stood by idly while hammering a hole in a solid floor, instead of restraining and cuffing him.

Cornell Squires, of the Original Detroit Coalition Against Police Brutality, was present d the Kellom home.

“This is usual with Kym Worthy’s office—stall the case, interfere with it, block evidence, charges,” he said. “Kym Worthy cannot be trusted. You have to do your own independen to encourage the family to get a second autopsy report, because we knew this was going is for sale when it comes to police officers. A second autopsy would have been credible e

Arnetta Grable, Sr. said she had already lined up Macomb County Medical Examiner Ma

But Roosevelt “Butch” Carrington, Jr. whose own brother Rodrick Carrington was killed

Williams told them the funeral would be held and an autopsy was done.

Worthy said during the press conference that she had seen numerous cops, including one recently from a different investigation.

However, during her tenure, she has prosecuted dozens of officers out of dozens who killed Detroiters. This reporter. They were Detroit cop Josiah Aiyana Jones, 7, in 2010, and Michigan Morningstar, for killing a homeless man. Prosecution clearly threw the case against the officers. Trials covered extensively by VOD, and a Morningstar.

Arnetta Grable, Jr. said new leadership is needed to reflect the sentiments of many young people across the city. Their counterparts slaughtered by law enforcement. As far this year alone, according to statistics at <http://killedbypolice.net>.

"I think it starts in community, with leaders who don't have our back and don't have our back," of it. I feel that we as a people, Black and white and whatever, need to stand up and make a decision whether we are going to lead us, or decide to lead ourselves. We are running ourselves into the ground and not listening to ministers, civil rights leaders, and others in the community that don't have our back. We need to fight for us. It's not going to be the feds, the city, the state, or any government. How did they let Terrance Kellom's house and treat him like that? How did they let them kill a little bitty that? We need to rise up. We can't sit around and do nothing."

So-called community leaders in Detroit have repeatedly stopped or sabotaged militant protests. In Baltimore which forced murder charges to be brought against four cops involved in the 1991

Candle Light Vigil for Aiyana Jones #1

A march and rebellion at that time may have changed the tenor of events afterwards, but the Jones family has faced unrelenting media attacks and watched as killer cop Weekley walk

Two weeks later, Rev. Horace Sheffield, Sam Riddle, and several others forestalled a march in the neighborhood near Aiyana's after Grosse Pointe and State Police shot and wounded an officer's neck as he exited his car after a chase.

Grable, Jr. called Prosecutor Worthy an "evil" person.

"She's never really been a mother, she never cared about the lives of us in this city or this country. She tried to do better," Grable, who has two children, including a son named Lamar after her son, said she is doing the devil's work. Next year will be the 20th anniversary of Lamar's death, on that date, I want her to resign. We're going to find everything we can find on her, so that she can't come back to Detroit again."

Protest at Frank Murphy Hall of Justice, Gratiot at St.

Over? This ain't over by a damned sight! Wayne County Prosecutor Kym Worthy did a g attorney for ICE agent, Mitchell Quinn by dehumanizing the victim, Terrance Kellom an Unfortunately, that's not her job. As prosecutor, Kym Worthy's job is to protect us from killers happen to be cops.

You can't convict killers by taking everything they say at face value and looking for evidence to support their claims. Worthy has held all the cards for 4 months. Now we'll have some time to look at her hand and point out discrepancies in the police account the way she was able to find fault with the account of a traumatized man who'd just seen his son die before his eyes.
