Baptist clergyman started preaching as a 5-year-old

BY MELANIE EVERSLEY
Free Press Staff Writer

Howard Bruno Manigault Fauntroy Jr. gave his life to ministering. For 27 years, he served as pastor of First Baptist Institutional Church in Detroit. He died Aug. 22.

Mr. Fauntroy was born in Washington and began preaching at age 5.

He earned a bachelor's degree from Virginia Union University, a master's degree from the University of Detroit, a doctorate in sacred theology from Harvard Divinity School and a PhD from the University of Chicago.

Mr. Fauntroy was pastor at Antioch Baptist Church in Washington from 1964 to 1969, when he moved to First Baptist Institutional Church.

He served for 24 years in the U.S. Army and retired as a colonel.

He is survived by his wife, Carmen; a daughter, Melanie; sons Howard and Charles; his mother, Charlotte Worsley; three sisters, and two brothers.

Visitation will be from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. today in the atrium at his church, 17101 W. Seven Mile. A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. today at the church. Burial details were not available.

DR. M. COLTON HUTCHINS, retired vice president and chief of medical staff at William Beaumont Hospital in Troy, died Tuesday of a stroke at the hospital.

A Boston native, Dr. Hutchins graduated magna cum laude from Tufts University in Medford, Mass., in 1943 and graduated cum laude from Tufts University Medical School in Boston in 1946.

Later enlisting in the U.S. Army Medical Corps, Dr. Hutchins rose to the rank of captain and served as chief of medicine at Clark Field in the Philippines.

Dr. Hutchins came to Detroit in 1955, opening an office in the Fisher Building in New Center. In 1977, he became an attending physician at William Beaumont Hospital in Troy and served as chief of medicine from 1979 to 1990. In 1992, he retired as the hospital's medical director and vice president.

A Bloomfield Hills resident, Dr. Hutchins was also a clinical assistant professor at Wayne State University School of Medicine and taught interns and residents at Harper and Grace hospitals.

Dr. Hutchins was a member of many professional associations. He also traveled extensively in Europe, Asia, Central America and North Africa.

Dr. Hutchins is survived by his wife, Ruth; daughters Pam Liedtke, Gail Duty, Marcia Fenton and Nancy Malon; and seven grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Kirk in the Hills, 1340 W. Long Lake, Bloomfield Hills.

JAMES PENNY STUART JR., 83, a boating and Rolls-Royce enthusiast, died Wednesday of congestive heart failure at his home in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Mr. Stuart was born in Brooklyn, N.Y. He graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in 1931 and Wayne State University in 1935.

Mr. Stuart married the former Elizabeth Henderson in 1944. In 1968, he cofounded the PCS Company in Fraser, a manufacturer of components for plastic injection molds.

Mr. Stuart was active in the Rolls-Royce Owners Club, the Classic Car Club of America and the Detroit Yacht Club.

Mr. Stuart is survived by his wife; a son, James Penny Stuart III; a daughter, Kathryn Stuart Steel, and a sister.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. today at the Verheyden Funeral Home, 16300 Mack, Grosse Pointe Park. Interment will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery, Lapeer.

SHEILA G. WILMERS, 83, a longtime Ferndale resident active in many civic affairs, died Tuesday at her home.

The former Sheila Goodnow was born in Detroit on Sept. 6, 1912. In 1940, she married Henry Wilmers, who died in 1994.

Mrs. Wilmers was active in the Ferndale Garden Club, the Detroit Garden Center, the Dames of the Loyal Legion and Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Wilmers is survived by a daughter, Dorothy Wilmers; a son, Brian Wilmers, and two grandsons. Private services were held Friday.

DEATHS ELSEWHERE

Phyllis Pearsall, 89, who created the millions-selling "A to Z" maps of London by walking more than 3,000 miles of streets, died there Wednesday. She began producing the maps in 1936 after getting lost in London. To get her first edition right, she often walked for 18 hours a day, eventually covering 23,000 streets and roads. The maps were an instant success, and she founded the Geographer's A-Z Map Co.

Motorcycle cop hits patrol car

A motorcycle police officer was injured Friday when he ran into the back of a police car parked for a traffic stop on 7 Mile.

Officer Mark Blackman, 33, suffered minor injuries and was in stable condition at Grace Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Blackman struck the car around 4:45 p.m. while eastbound on 7 Mile on his way to the Michigan State Fair. He tried to pass a police car that was stopped in the right lane of 7 Mile near Birchcrest Drive.

The motorcycle clipped the rear edge of the car as Blackman tried to pass, said police spokeswoman Otis Milhouse.

The officer in the police car was not injured.

Multistate game begins today

Starting at 6 a.m. today, lottery players will have a new way to try their luck. That's when tickets for a multistate lottery go on sale.

The weekly drawing is called the Big Game. Jackpots will start at $5 million.

The first drawing for the lottery, which includes Massachusetts, Virginia, Georgia, Illinois and Maryland, will be Friday.

Sterling Heights
Work crews mop up spill

Crews will work through the weekend if necessary to clean a noxious chemical that spilled into the Plumbrook Drain on Thursday, a state official said Friday.

The spill, which created a 4- to 5-mile-long white streak in the drain, is contained by earthen dams, said Tim Jaski of the Department of Environmental Quality.

The substance, used to cure concrete, leaked from a tank at a construction site on Mound Road south of 18 Mile. Jaski advised anyone who comes in contact with it to shower.

Romulus
Toddler's body is exhumed

Authorities have exhumed the body of 2-year-old Jason Smith, who died three years ago under mysterious circumstances, police said Friday.

Jason's mother, Jennifer Scibilia, 24, has been charged with murder in the July 17 death of another son, Matthew Bower, 3. An autopsy showed he had been suffocated. Scibilia is being held without bond in the Monroe County Jail pending trial.

A 1993 autopsy on Jason's body resulted in conflicting opinions on the cause of death. Romulus police Sgt. Gordon Malanik said he could not comment on the new autopsy.

Detroit
Shop owner ruled not guilty

A Recorder's Court jury found Richard Jarrett not guilty Friday of second-degree murder in the death of Robert Cadwell Jr. It could not decide whether Jarrett committed second-degree murder in the death of Angela Martin.

But the 12 jurors found Jarrett guilty of possessing a firearm while committing a felony.

Jarrett, owner of Off the Rack Family Discount Center, was accused of killing Cadwell and Martin on Feb. 9 after they came into his east side store and took clothing as payment on a $4,000 debt.

Prosecutors plan to retry Jarrett in Martin's death. Judge Geraldine Ford said she will set a new trial date next week.

Audit says drug program hasn't helped prevent repeat offenses

State faults report, seeks own prison study

BY JUDY DAUBENMIER
Associated Press

LANSING — A $10.1-million program to provide drug treatment to Michigan prisoners is a weak tool for keeping them from returning to crime, an audit says.

The review by Auditor General Thomas McTavish found 13 percent of prisoners who received drug treatment in prison ended up behind bars again. That was lower than the 14.7 percent in a comparison group.

"The substance abuse treatment appears to have been marginally effective in contributing to prisoner rehabilitation," the review said.

The review, released Thursday, found that prisoners who had drug treatment behind bars had more arrests and convictions for new crimes than the group that did not receive substance abuse treatment. But fewer of those who received treatment actually returned to prison.

The state corrections department said in a written response that the analysis was flawed because it failed to take into account several variables such as prisoners who had left the state or the differing lengths of time after prisoners had gotten out.

Department spokesman Warren Williams said the agency is seeking federal funds to do its own study.

"There are no definitive studies right now to prove or disprove conclusively that substance abuse services have a direct (impact) or what kind of correlation there is between substance abuse treatment and recidivism," he said Friday.

While it might seem logical that helping someone kick a drug habit might keep them out of prison, that's not necessarily so, Williams said.

"It's up to the individual. You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink. You can give a drug abuser all kinds of treatment but if they're still of a mind to continue using illegal substances, there's not too much anybody can do to stop that," he said.

The audit said 67 percent of all new prisoners coming into the system have substance abuse problems. The department spent $10.1 million in 1994-95 to provide drug education and treatment services to 11,392 prisoners and $2.5 million for prisoner drug testing.

The audit said the department: ■ Failed to make sure prisoners who started a program finished it. Just 57 percent of prisoners who entered a treatment program finished it during the period from July 1, 1992, to June 30, 1994.

■ Did not make sure all prisoners who needed substance abuse treatment received services. It said the department released 9,188 prisoners during the two-year period without assessing their drug problems or providing them with recommended treatment.

■ Did not evaluate the effectiveness of independent contractors who provided substance abuse services. Success rates for prisoners in programs run by various contractors ranged from 16.1 percent to 93.7 percent, the audit said.

The review also said the department's random drug testing of prisoners was effective in deterring drug use by prisoners, parolees and probationers. But it still found problems with testing.

Prisons with more than 5 percent of inmates testing positive for drugs failed to show they had investigated the cause for the high rates, the review said.

And it said officials at some prisons did not always refer prisoners with positive drug test results to substance abuse education or treatment, even though department policy requires they be referred within 30 days.

3 tribes to go after federal OK for casinos

BY JUDY DAUBENMIER
Associated Press

LANSING — Three Indian tribes are preparing to seek federal approval to run casinos after a judge tossed out their lawsuit over the state Legislature's refusal to ratify gambling compacts with them.

Mark Jarboe, a lawyer representing the three tribes, said Friday he expects U.S. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt to approve gambling for the three tribes.

"It's almost certain given the fact that the other seven tribes in the state have compacts," he said.

"Quite honestly, I have a lot of difficulty seeing any way that at the end of this process these three tribes can't do the same thing the other seven are doing. There's just no way to distinguish the situation."

A spokesman for Gov. John Engler said the suit's dismissal was expected. "We didn't believe that there was grounds for a suit. We negotiated in good faith," said John Truscott.

Truscott said he doubted Babbitt would approve gambling for the tribes. "It would establish a very dangerous precedent if the secretary just went completely around the state," he said.

The rejected compacts would have permitted casinos in New Buffalo for the Pokagon Band of Potawatomi Indians, in Mackinaw City for the Little Traverse Band of Odawa Indians and in Manistee for the Little River Band of Ottawa Indians.

The agreements are similar to those negotiated earlier by Engler with seven tribes already operating 13 casinos in Michigan, including requiring payments of 8 percent of slot machine revenue to the state and 2 percent to local communities. The major difference is that the three latest compacts would have limited the tribes to one casino each.

But they stalled in the Legislature after becoming entangled in a dispute over gambling in Detroit and opposition to more gambling in the state.

The three tribes had said all along if the Legislature failed to ratify the agreements, they would seek federal approval instead. But procedures required them to first sue the state in federal court, alleging it failed to negotiate in good faith.

The state in turn asserted its immunity from federal suit under the 11th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution unless it consents to being sued.

U.S. District Judge Wendell Miles dismissed that suit, citing lack of jurisdiction, in an order dated Aug. 23 and received by the state on Monday.

Jarboe said the tribes now must decide what to include in their proposed compacts.

"There's no guarantee they'll be the same" as the compacts negotiated by the tribes with Engler, Jarboe said. And he said the state will have little to say about what form of gambling compact is approved.

"The state had the ability to be involved through the compacting route and decided not to do that. That was the state's opportunity to be involved in helping shape this," he said.

Jarboe said the tribes likely will submit their proposed gambling plans to Babbitt in September, but he does not expect Babbitt to act until after the November election.

It is unclear exactly what procedure Babbitt will follow, but in a 1992 case he made a decision and published it in the Federal Register for a 30-day public comment period, Jarboe said.

Lake County picked for juvenile prison

Facility will house up to 480 young men

BY DAWSON BELL
Free Press Staff Writer

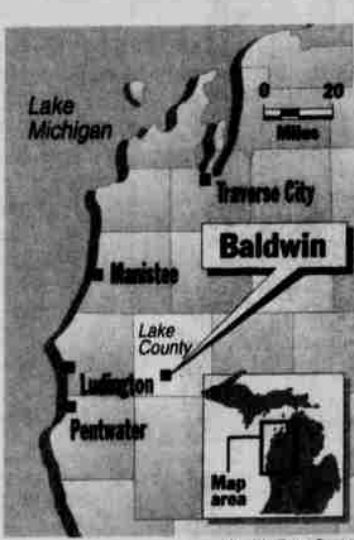

A 140-acre parcel of vacant, state-owned land in rural Lake County near Baldwin has been selected by the Department of Corrections as the site for the state's new prison for violent juvenile offenders.

Corrections Director Kenneth McGinnis notified local officials Friday that the so-called "punk prison" would be coming to Baldwin. The department had been reviewing proposals from a dozen communities since a location near Caro was rejected earlier this year after residents opposed it.

The site in Lake County, one of the poorest counties in Michigan, apparently won't have that problem. County Commissioner Rosanne Richards said Friday, "We are pleased. It presents a really exciting opportunity for us."

Richards said the prison will provide a boost to the local economy.

The juvenile prison, which will house up to 480 young men up to age 19, is to be the state's first privately-operated prison. The Department of Corrections expects to start the bidding process next week. Construction could be delayed until next year unless the Legislature agrees to expedite funding.

Detroit Free Press

A spokesman for Gov. John Engler said he will seek immediate funding when lawmakers return for an abbreviated fall session next month.

Department spokesman Warren Williams said the site, north of Baldwin off M-37, was "a strong proposal with an overwhelming show of community support."

The prison is expected to cost about $65 million to build and to employ more than 300 people. Williams said a state-operated prison of that size would have a payroll of about $16 million a year.
